Dru Sjodin

National Sex Offender Public Website

The Dru Sjodin National Sex Offender Public Website is an unprecedented public safety resource for sharing information about sex offenders nationwide. NSOPW.gov links public sex offender registry websites from all 50 states, the District of Columbia, principal U.S. territories and certain Indian tribes to one national search site securely and free of charge. With a single query, NSOPW.gov allows you to quickly and comprehensively search across the country.

NSOPW.gov provides:

Sex offender data from all 50 states, the District of Columbia, principal U.S. territories and certain federally recognized Indian tribes in one search.

Up-to-date information on registered sex offenders 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, free of charge.

Customized searches by name, address, city, county, state or ZIP code. Access NSOPW online or download the app to your mobile device.

Safety and education information and resources, including facts about sexual abuse and ways to protect yourself and your loved ones from potential victimization.

To search, visit NSOPW.gov or download the app to your mobile device.

The Dru Sjodin National Sex Offender Public Website was named for Dru Sjodin, a 22-year-old college student who was kidnapped and murdered by a sex offender who crossed state lines to commit his crime.

Created by the Department of Justice in 2005, NSOPW.gov is a valuable tool for parents, schools, caretakers and employers—anyone seeking to educate themselves, their families and communities about sex offenders and sexual abuse prevention and response. As a safety resource, NSOPW.gov provides information on where sex offenders live, work and go to school.
