Introduction

The Sex Offender Registration and Notification Act (SORNA), Title I of the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006, set revised standards for states, territories and certain federally recognized tribes to meet as they modify or establish their sex offender registration and notification systems. SORNA differs from prior federal sex offender registration and notification statutes in that it encompasses a more comprehensive group of sex offenders and sex offenses for which registration is required. Notably, SORNA expands on its legislative predecessors by including certain juveniles adjudicated delinquent of serious sex offenses in its registration and notification standards.

The inclusion of juveniles in SORNA has drawn attention generally to how juveniles are adjudicated and sentenced for serious sex offenses in juvenile courts. However, the full range of alternative approaches for prosecuting serious sex offenses in juvenile courts across the country has received somewhat less attention. In an analysis of sex offender registration and notification requirements for juveniles, it is helpful to understand the various systems of prosecuting and adjudicating juveniles who commit serious sex offenses. Thus, this summary includes an overview of these pieces generally and in relation to SORNA.

The first section of this summary examines the state of the law in the United States regarding juvenile adjudication, with short overviews of juvenile courts and the age of criminal responsibility. Next, it covers the factors considered in determining if a juvenile can be tried as an adult and the methods for prosecuting a juvenile as an adult.

The second section of this summary explores the relevant provisions of state and territorial laws regarding sex offender registration for juveniles adjudicated delinquent of serious sex offenses in juvenile court.¹ Next, it covers SORNA's requirements regarding public website posting of juveniles' registration information and if states and territories have mandatory, discretionary or no website posting.

The third section contains a summary of each state and territory's provisions for the prosecution, transfer and registration of juveniles charged with and adjudicated delinquent of serious sex offenses.

¹ This summary does not include specific information about tribal prosecution or registration of juveniles who commit serious sex offenses.

I. Juvenile Adjudication

A. Serious Sex Offenses in Juvenile Courts

Adjudication of serious sex offenses committed by juveniles will generally commence in juvenile court, unless excluded by waiver or age of adult criminal responsibility. Juveniles prosecuted in juvenile court have many of the same constitutional rights as adult criminal defendants — and juveniles adjudicated delinquent face many of the same consequences as convicted adults, including incarceration, probation supervision, and sex offender registration. This summary focuses on the offenses for which SORNA requires adjudicated delinquent juveniles to register. As will be discussed later in this summary, SORNA requires registration of any juvenile adjudicated delinquent of a sex offense that is comparable to or more severe than aggravated sexual abuse, as long as the juvenile was 14 years of age or older at the time of the offense. This includes all penetration offenses that the juvenile committed by force or the threat of serious violence, or by drugging or rendering the victim unconscious. In this summary, these SORNA-registerable juvenile offenses are referred to as “serious sex offenses.”

B. Age of Adult Criminal Responsibility

The age of adult criminal responsibility is the age at which a person is automatically referred to the adult criminal justice system for the prosecution of a criminal offense. This age is governed by the individual’s age at the time of the offense, not the individual’s age at arrest, prosecution or sentencing. The age of adult criminal responsibility varies across the country. In the federal system, the age of adult criminal responsibility is 18, and most jurisdictions use the age of 18 as their age of adult criminal responsibility. However, some jurisdictions use an age of 16 (Guam and North Carolina) or 17 (Georgia, Michigan, Missouri, Texas and Wisconsin).

C. Charging Decision

The charging decision is one of the most critical choices a prosecutor makes when pursuing a case: The offense(s) a juvenile is charged with is the single most important factor in determining what options will be available regarding filing, transfer, discovery, detention and sentencing. The prosecutor’s discretion includes the number of charges, their severity and at what degree, which have mandatory sentencing, and which have collateral consequences. A prosecutor might try to negotiate a plea deal with the juvenile’s counsel in exchange for the case remaining in juvenile court, or a reduced sentence or ineligibility for sex offender registration.

In the vast majority of jurisdictions, the offense(s) a juvenile is charged with (along with the juvenile’s age) will determine whether the juvenile is subject to legislative, prosecutorial or judicial waiver to adult criminal court.

D. Methods for Prosecuting a Juvenile as an Adult

Even if a juvenile was under the state’s age of adult criminal responsibility at the time an offense was committed, nearly every state and territory has carved out at least one mechanism by which a juvenile might be tried as an adult for a serious sex offense.² There are three basic mechanisms to do this: legislative waiver, prosecutorial waiver and judicial waiver. Depending on the state or territory, one, two or all three mechanisms might be available. Under legislative waiver, the state or territory mandates by law that juveniles of a certain age charged with certain crimes will be prosecuted in adult criminal court. Under prosecutorial waiver, the prosecutor may have discretion to file charges directly in adult court or file a motion in juvenile court that, upon certain findings, automatically transfers the case to adult criminal court. Under judicial waiver — the most common mechanism used to transfer juveniles to adult criminal court — the juvenile court judge sua sponte or upon the prosecutor’s motion generally holds a hearing to determine if a juvenile should be transferred to adult court. Depending on the jurisdiction and the type of waiver, after a case has been waived to adult criminal court, the juvenile may be able to request a “reverse-amenability” or “reverse-transfer” (which usually involves a hearing) to have the case returned to juvenile court.

This summary covers waiver provisions that affect prosecutions of juveniles for serious sex offenses, not including waivers based on recidivism or aggravating factors.³ This summary does not cover waiver laws that apply only to prosecutions of other sex offenses or of non-sex offenses. See Section III for descriptions of each state and territory’s juvenile waiver provisions, including citations to the relevant code sections.

1. Legislative Waiver

States and territories that have legislative waiver mandate by law that juveniles of a certain age charged with certain crimes will be automatically prosecuted in adult criminal court. In such cases, the prosecutor does not need to make a procedural motion to transfer the juvenile, and the juvenile court judge does not make any determination on the juvenile’s ongoing amenability to treatment and rehabilitation in juvenile court. In these jurisdictions, there is little, if any, contact between the juvenile and the juvenile court during the initial stages of prosecution. This legislative waiver of juvenile court jurisdiction is not appealable, and the juvenile court has no discretion to retain the case. Occasionally, the juvenile court will conduct a preliminary hearing on the facts of the case before sending it to adult criminal court for trial.

² As of December 2021, New Mexico is the only state or territory that does not have a mechanism for juveniles to be tried as adults for serious sex offenses.

³ As noted, this summary uses “serious sex offenses” to refer to those sex offenses for which SORNA requires a juvenile adjudicated delinquent to register.

A total of 26 states and territories, listed below, require that a prosecution be initiated in adult criminal court against a juvenile charged with serious sex offenses, at the ages listed.

† Different charges are waived at different ages.

2. Prosecutorial Waiver

With prosecutorial waiver, the discretion to prosecute a juvenile as an adult is a procedural decision that rests with the prosecutor. In jurisdictions with prosecutorial waiver, prosecutors are generally able to file charges directly in adult court; however, some jurisdictions require that the juvenile court makes certain factual findings before the transfer is completed. Notably, the eligible age for prosecutorial waiver tends to be older than the eligible age for judicial waiver.

Direct file charges. In most jurisdictions that allow prosecutorial waiver, prosecutors have full discretion to directly file criminal charges against a juvenile in adult court. In some states and territories, the authority to directly file is very broad, with concurrent jurisdiction shared by juvenile and adult courts. Concurrent jurisdiction states and territories tend to allow the prosecutor to charge the juvenile with any offense in adult court as long as the juvenile meets the age threshold.

Mandatory transfer upon factual finding. Some jurisdictions allow the mandatory transfer of a case from juvenile court to adult criminal court after a fact-finding hearing. In these cases, the prosecutor can initiate the process by directly filing charges in adult court or by petitioning the juvenile court, depending on the jurisdiction. The juvenile court then holds a hearing, and if the appropriate factual findings are made (such as whether there is probable cause to believe the juvenile committed the charged offense), the juvenile court judge has no discretion to retain the case in juvenile court, and the case must be transferred to adult criminal court.

A total of 12 states, listed below, provide for prosecutorial waiver for juveniles charged with serious sex offenses.

3. Judicial Waiver

In jurisdictions with judicial waiver, juveniles may be transferred to adult criminal court for trial by way of a discretionary transfer procedure. Discretionary transfer often requires a juvenile court judge to find probable cause that a juvenile committed the underlying offense and to determine that the juvenile is no longer amenable to treatment and rehabilitation in the juvenile court system. Upon the prosecutor's motion (and sometimes sua sponte), the juvenile court judge conducts a transfer hearing to determine whether the juvenile is amenable to further treatment and rehabilitation through the juvenile court system. Generally speaking, if the juvenile court finds that the juvenile is no longer amenable to treatment or rehabilitation in juvenile court, the judge will transfer the juvenile for trial as an adult. While several jurisdictions allow a juvenile of any age to be eligible for judicial waiver, most jurisdictions set a minimum age of eligibility. However, juveniles are often eligible for discretionary transfer at younger ages than are required for legislative waiver or prosecutorial waiver proceedings. In addition, unlike legislative and prosecutorial waivers, which are predicated on the juvenile being charged with a more severe offense, many jurisdictions allow for juveniles charged with any felony, or any offense, to be eligible for judicial waiver.

Nearly every state and territory has a discretionary judicial transfer procedure, as listed on the following page. Four states do not: Massachusetts, Montana, New Mexico and New York.

II. Juvenile Sex Offender Registration

A. Juvenile Sex Offender Registration — Generally

Juveniles adjudicated delinquent of sex offenses have gradually been incorporated into the overall sex offender registration and notification process in the United States. Over the past few decades, the majority of states and territories have enacted provisions specifying that certain adjudicated juveniles are required to register.

Jurisdictions approach registration for juveniles adjudicated delinquent of serious sex offenses in juvenile court in one of the following ways: 1) mandated as a result of the adjudication, 2) discretionary, or 3) no registration for juveniles adjudicated delinquent. In addition, some states register juveniles who commit serious sex offenses if the court has determined that the juvenile must be committed for involuntary treatment. In those instances, the juvenile is classified as “sexually violent” and required to register.⁴

1. Jurisdictions That Mandate Registration for Juveniles Adjudicated Delinquent of the Most Serious Sex Offenses

The states and territories listed below mandate sex offender registration and notification for juveniles adjudicated delinquent of serious sex offenses. See Section III for details of each state and territory’s registration requirements for juveniles.

Alabama*	Guam*	Minnesota	South Carolina*
American Samoa*	Idaho	Mississippi*	South Dakota*
California	Illinois	Missouri*	Tennessee*
Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands*	Iowa	Montana	U.S. Virgin Islands*
Colorado*	Kansas*	Nevada*	Utah
Delaware*	Louisiana*	New Jersey	Washington
Florida*	Maryland*	North Dakota	Wisconsin
	Michigan*	Rhode Island	Wyoming*

* Jurisdiction has substantially implemented SORNA.

⁴ For instance, Pennsylvania registers juveniles designated as “Sexually Violent Delinquent Children” and mandates posting of their information on its public registry website.

2. Jurisdictions With Discretionary Registration

The following states make certain juveniles adjudicated delinquent of serious sex offenses eligible for sex offender registration and notification requirements, but require an additional determination (usually by a juvenile court judge) before ordering registration.

Arizona	Massachusetts	North Carolina	Oregon
Arkansas	New Hampshire	Ohio*	Texas
Indiana	New Mexico	Oklahoma*	Virginia*

* Jurisdiction has substantially implemented SORNA.

3. Jurisdictions That Do Not Register Juveniles

The following states and territories generally do not register juveniles adjudicated delinquent of a sex offense.⁵

Alaska	Hawaii	Nebraska	Puerto Rico
Connecticut	Kentucky	New York	Vermont
District of Columbia	Maine	Pennsylvania	West Virginia
Georgia

B. SORNA and Juvenile Sex Offender Registration

SORNA sets forth the current set of federal standards applicable to jurisdictions' sex offender registration and notification systems and requires registration for certain juveniles adjudicated delinquent of serious sex offenses. Specifically, SORNA requires that jurisdictions register juveniles who were at least 14 years old at the time of the offense and who have been adjudicated delinquent for committing (or attempting or conspiring to commit) a sexual act with another by force, by threat of serious violence, or by rendering unconscious or drugging the victim. (18 U.S.C. § 2241(a) or (b)). Generally speaking, this includes all forcible penetration offenses.

If a jurisdiction does not conform exactly to the juvenile registration requirements under SORNA, the SMART Office, pursuant to the 2016 Supplemental Guidelines for Juvenile Registration Under the Sex Offender Registration and Notification Act \(Juvenile Supplemental Guidelines\), may expand its inquiry in determining whether a jurisdiction has substantially implemented SORNA’s juvenile registration provisions. Specifically, the Juvenile Supplemental Guidelines allow the SMART Office to consider the following:

1. Policies and practices to prosecute, as adults, juveniles who commit serious sex offenses;
2. Policies and practices to register juveniles adjudicated delinquent for serious sex offenses; and
3. Other policies and practices to identify, track, monitor or manage juveniles adjudicated delinquent for serious sex offenses who are in the community and to ensure that their identities and sex offense conviction information are available as needed for public safety purposes.

Using these factors, the SMART Office examines a jurisdiction’s scheme to determine whether it satisfies SORNA’s standards, even if the jurisdiction does not automatically register all juveniles for whom registration is required under SORNA.

Prior to the enactment of SORNA in July 2006, 36 states and one territory had laws in place that required certain juveniles adjudicated delinquent of sex offenses to register as sex offenders. Since the passage of SORNA, five states and three territories that previously did not register adjudicated juveniles have passed legislation to register certain juvenile sex offenders.

C. Public Registry Website Posting

In 2011, the Attorney General issued Supplemental Guidelines for Sex Offender Registration and Notification that specifically granted jurisdictions discretion on whether to post information about juveniles adjudicated delinquent on their public sex offender registry websites. For their part, jurisdictions may mandate website posting of information for juveniles subject to the jurisdiction’s registration requirements, make posting discretionary, or prohibit posting altogether.

1. Mandatory Website Posting

The following 15 states and territories mandate public posting of information about any juvenile required to register based on an adjudication of delinquency for a serious sex offense.

Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands*	Indiana	Mississippi*	South Carolina*
Delaware*	Iowa	Missouri*	South Dakota*
Florida*	Kansas*	Nevada*	Utah†
	Louisiana*	North Dakota	Virginia*

* Jurisdiction has substantially implemented SORNA.

† Utah does not require public posting of information about juveniles adjudicated delinquent if they were adjudicated in another jurisdiction and that jurisdiction does not require that their information be posted. Utah Code Ann. § 77-41-105(5)(b)).

2. Discretionary Website Posting

The following 13 states either grant the juvenile court judge discretion to order public posting of information about a juvenile ordered to register, or use a risk-assessment process to make that determination.

Alabama*	Massachusetts	New Jersey	Oregon
Arizona	Montana	Ohio*	Texas
Colorado*	New Mexico	Oklahoma*	Washington
Idaho

* Jurisdiction has substantially implemented SORNA.

3. No Website Posting

The following 15 states and territories register certain juveniles adjudicated delinquent of a sex offense but do not post any juvenile information on their public registry website.⁶

American Samoa*	Illinois	New Hampshire	U.S. Virgin Islands*
Arkansas	Maryland*	North Carolina	Wisconsin
California	Michigan*	Rhode Island	Wyoming*
Guam*	Minnesota	Tennessee*

*Jurisdiction has substantially implemented SORNA.

⁶ The following states do not register juveniles based on a delinquency adjudication and thus do not list juveniles on their public registry website: Alaska, Connecticut, District of Columbia, Georgia, Hawaii, Kentucky, Maine, Nebraska, New York, Puerto Rico, Vermont and West Virginia. Pennsylvania posts information about juveniles designated as “Sexually Violent Delinquent Children” on its public registry website.

III. State and Territory Profiles

The profiles below outline U.S. state and territory provisions for the prosecution, transfer and registration of juveniles charged with and adjudicated delinquent of serious sex offenses, as defined by SORNA. The profile for each state or territory includes the age of adult criminal responsibility; whether waiver is available, and if so, which types and under which circumstances; registration provisions for juveniles adjudicated delinquent of serious sex offenses; and website posting provisions. As this summary focuses on serious sex offenses as defined by SORNA, adjudications of delinquency for other sex offenses may not be subject to registration, or may be subject to registration requirements not listed here. Although the minimum age for juvenile registration under SORNA is 14, the information below specifies the actual minimum age at which each jurisdiction requires registration for serious sex offenses.
